

THE FARM

Poultry.

Fowls prefer, as well as need, good pure, cold water, especially in warm, sultry weather.

Young chickens may be allowed the run of the garden, the mother being cooped, and the havoc they make among insects is an excellent thing.

Inflammation of the egg organs is generally caused by overfeeding. Eating the seeds of grapes, or grain affected with ergot, is said to produce this inflammation. Symptoms: the hen going into the nest without laying; having a straddling gait; laying shellless eggs; dropping eggs from the perch or elsewhere. Treatment: one grain of calomel and one-twelfth of a grain of tartar emetic, given in eat or barley meal. If necessary, a second dose may be given.

When a dealer wishes to add a knock-down argument to all he has said about the merits of the breed of fowls he has for sale, he urges that their flesh is of extra quality. Now there is no breed of fowls under the sun, the chickens of which, if well fed all their lives, will not be tender, juicy and toothsome if killed before they are too old. And there is no breed that will be plump, tender and fit for the table unless fed thus. Mind, we do not say that there is no difference at all in breeds, but we say, that of the two things, the breed and feeding, the latter is most important.

The white of an egg has proved to be the most efficacious remedy for burns. Seven or eight successive applications of this substance will sooth the pain and effectually exclude the burn from the air. This simple remedy seems preferable to oiledien, or even cotton. Extraordinary stories are told of the healing properties of a new oil, which is easily made from the yolks of hens' eggs. The eggs are first boiled hard, and the yolks are then removed, crushed and placed over a fire, where they are carefully stirred until the whole substance is just on the point of catching fire, when the oil separates and may be poured off. One yolk will yield nearly two teaspoonfuls of oil. It is in general use in South Russia as a means of curing cuts, bruises and scratches.

I think the lime-dust treatment the best of all cures for gapes in chickens. It is cheap, simple and effective. I put a whole breed of chickens in a peck measure with a bag over the top. A barrel partly filled with air-slaked lime, as dry as powder, was turned on its side and the lime was stirred with a stick until the whole barrel was filled with lime floating in the air. The chickens were put in this, with the bag over the mouth of the barrel. They were put into the dust three times, not more than a minute each time. They should be kept in the measure all the time. We let one breed stay in too long and lost five out of seven. The windpipes of the dead chickens were found more than half filled with gape worms, which made it more difficult for them to breathe. My little son, seven years old, treats his chickens in this way successfully. The lime can be slaked with water and then allowed to dry so as to powder. A lot of lime thus prepared will last for years for this purpose.

Timely Suggestions.

THE CAREFUL FARMER.

Some gentlemen from the city went out in the country on a fishing trip recently, and a rain coming up suddenly they pulled their boat ashore and went to a barn near a farm house to get in out of the wet. They found the farmer in the barn sitting on an upturned half bushel, whittling a cob, waiting for the rain to cease so he could go out and kill potato bugs. He bowed to the men as they came in, and sat their fishing tackle down, though he eyed them pretty closely. He didn't talk much, but answered their questions politely. They asked all about the farming business, and he told them how things were running. Finally he said:

"I suppose you are gentlemen from the city, come out here for recreation, but I didn't know at first but you might have some scheme to get me to buy something, or make me agent for some patent, or that you wanted to get me to sign some paper that would seem innocent enough, but which would turn out to be a note that I would have to pay. There's sharks around here every few days trying to pick up farmers, and we have to keep our eyes and ears about us. I am satisfied I have made a mistake in you, gentlemen, so I apologize."

The gentlemen laughed at his fears, but accepted his apology, and finally asked him what course the sharpers usually took to beat a farmer.

"O, they take every kind of a course," said he, as he took another cob to whittle. "Anything to get a man to sign his name. Once a farmer's name is on paper, and they get it on to a promissory note, and into the hands of an innocent party. I had a man come along here two years ago, with a patent churn, and he left it for my wife to try. She tried it, and liked it, and wanted to buy it, but he wouldn't sell it. He said he was just getting it patented, and he wanted a few of the best farmers to try it, and make any suggestions they thought of to improve it, and he would make the improvements and get it patented. He said when it was patented, and was a success, he had just as soon make my wife a present of a churn, but he shouldn't sell any, as he should put it in the hands of some large factory to build, and he would get a royalty. He wanted a few letters from these who had tried the churn, to send to our member of congress, who had promised to go to the patent office for him. He wrote out a letter to our member of congress, saying that I believed there was merit in the churn, and I signed it. How the deuce he got my name off of that letter, and put it at the bottom of a note for two hundred and fifty dollars, I don't know, but I had to pay the note, and my wife has never got the churn. But the slickest thing that farmers ever got took in on was Bohemian oats. About ten years ago a man came along with a baking powder can full of oats without any hulls on—just the plain meat of the oats. He said he was an agent of the German government, and that every farmer in every township could buy a bushel of the oats for five dollars, if he would contract not to sell the crop of hull-less oats to anybody but the authorized agent, and he was to agree to pay four dollars a bushel. The idea was to create a monopoly in hull-less oats. He just mentioned it to me, he said, that I might think it over, and in the meantime he would make some inquiries as to my standing. Well, for a week I dreamed of nothing but Bohemian oats, and by the time he came around again I was as ripe as the oats, and I wanted ten bushels. He said he would have to communicate with the general office before he could sell me more than one bushel, but he didn't know

"COME IN WILLIAM."

A Charitable Head Agent's Little Scheme.

In 1866, which was almost before the Canada Pacific Railroad was thought of, the writer of this was encamped on Beaver River, in the Canadian North-West well up in the foothills of the Rockies. Six of us, who were prospecting, hunting, and taking things pretty easy for July weather, occupied a large cabin which had been built and deserted some time before. From this central point small parties branched out and were gone for several days at a time. We had no trouble with anything or anybody until, after we had occupied the place seventeen or eighteen days, a bad spell of weather came on and drove all the detached parties in for shelter. We were well heeled in the matter of firearms, and there was something like

A THOUSAND DOLLARS IN GOLD among the six. For cook we had an old soldier who had been discharged from the regular army after long service.

One morning, it being the third day of the bad weather, and the rain still falling, Joe, our cook, went down to the forks of the Beaver to meet a canoe which we expected up with provisions. The door of the cabin was shut, and there was a bit of fire on the hearth at which some of the men were moulding bullets, and over which a kettle of pork and beans was boiling. Two of the gang were playing cards, and a third was reading, while I was examining some mineral specimens. In this state of affairs the door softly opened, and in walked a young man about 23 years of age. He was smooth-faced, red-cheeked, and had such a smile on his phiz that the sight of him would have set anyone to grinning. He looked from one to the other, as if to make sure that all were present, and then stepped back and opened the door and called,

"Come in, William, they are at home."

A short, stout, ugly-faced man of forty pushed his way in, shut the door, and stood with his back to it. That he was a hard pill no one could doubt after looking into his face; that he meant business was apparent from his having a revolver in either hand. Had

SOME ONE YELLED "INDIANS!"

I think the six of us, each with a revolver ready to shoot, would have been out doors in twenty seconds. Here we all sat as dumb as oysters and as helpless as snails, for we realized that it was a "stand up."

"Now, gents," said the young man showing his white teeth as he smiled, "I want to raise a few hundred dollars for an orphan asylum in the States. I shall expect each one of you to contribute. If any gentleman should so far forget himself as to pull his gun, my friend William, who shoots both-handed, will promptly attend to his case."

It was only after this little speech that we fully comprehended what was going on. William kept every man of us under his eye with his two pistols ready for service, and we were cowed. I knew that the average man will feel contempt for us and assert that he would have done this or that had he been one of the six, but he is mistaken. Under like circumstances, unless he was a fool, he would have tamely submitted. That red-cheeked boy, as we were not long in concluding, was a road agent named Col. Lee, and the man William had justly earned the general office before he could sell me more than one bushel, but he didn't know but he could arrange it so I could have a county right, and be the only man in the county who could raise the oats. He said he hated to let one man have such a chance to get rich, but he had struck three or four farmers that had no standing, and he wouldn't let them have a kernel of the oats for love or money, and as he had got to go to Iowa soon he might give me the county, but I must not say anything about it. He would be back in a week, and by that time he would know if I could have the county. He might have let me have the earth, if he had waited another week. Well, to make a long story short, I bought fifty bushels of oats, signed a contract to sell to nobody but him, and I got two farmers to sign with me as security, and the next spring I sowed the oats."

"What did you get?" asked one of the fishermen, as he looked out of the barn door, and found that the rain had cleared off.

"Get!" said the farmer, as he rose up and kicked the half bushel measure across the barn. "I got a fair crop of common oats, with hulls on, which I sold from the threshing machine for twenty cents a bushel. The oats he sold me were common oats, with the hulls taken off, and I paid him five dollars a bushel for them in cash, and the contract I signed, turned out to be a note for five hundred dollars, endorsed by two of the best farmers in town, and I paid it."

"Well, he spoke the truth when he said he didn't like to see one man get too rich," said one of the fishermen, "but I should have supposed he would have come round the next year and bought your crops, as he promised. But I suppose you violated your contract by selling the oats to other parties."

"Come around again," said the farmer. "He would have been lynched. Why I found that he had sold Bohemian oats to over fifty farmers in this township, and in the county I don't know how many farmers took the bait. You can't imagine how I felt, after hugging that secret to my heart all summer, and watching the oats grow, to see them head out just like ordinary oats, and when it came over me that I had been sold, and was not going to be rich, but poorer than ever, I was actually sick for a month. The doctors called it nervous prostration, but it was Bohemian oats fever, that's what it was."

"Well," said one of the fishermen, "the over, and we will go out and see if ill bite as well as the farmers," sent off, while the farmer was paris green in a pan, and looking he had rather feed it to the the oats than to the pe-

"Come, gents, time is money with us," said the Colonel as we sat staring at him. "Here's my cap, who chips in the first hundred dollars?"

He held it toward me, and I dropped in four twenties, which was all I had. The next man came down with $200; the next with $150, and by the time the last had contributed the Colonel had $800 in his cap. In transferring it to his pocket he counted the money, and as he put his cap on his head he said:

"This will go a good way toward making the little orphans happy. I don't want anything else, gentlemen, and we will now take our leave. I would advise you not to follow, though of course you can act your own pleasure. I wish you good morning."

The two backed out and shut the door, which swung out instead of in. Scarcely had it closed before we made a rush, but they were still too smart for us. They had braced a log against it, and there was only one window in the house. Before anyone had volunteered to crawl out of that the two fellows had made good their escape.

In going away they met our cook on his way back, and the Colonel handed him a flask of whiskey and asked him to present it to us with his compliments. We took the trail and pursued it for several hours, but we had seen the last of them.

A Faithful Animal.

A very strange and pathetic occurrence has just come under observation at Tiffin. Last October little Freddy Luiz, son of Mr. and Mrs. Luiz of Tiffin, was taken suddenly ill and died. He was a kind and loving boy, and had for a pet a little terrier dog, to which he was very kind. After his death the dog shewed signs of great grief, crying and howling pitifully. Since the death of their beloved son the parents have regularly visited his grave and strewed flowers and dropped tears upon the little mound. The dog always accompanied them, and at the grave would shew unmistakable signs of grief. A few days ago the family visited the grave and the dog did not return home with them. Late in the evening the superintendent of the cemetery, Mr. Cleuser, saw the dog lying on his young master's grave howling pitifully and tried to drive him away, but he would not go. He laid there until the middle of the next day, when he was finally driven away with great effort.

A Short Outfit.

When Ethalinda De Wiggs visited her cousins in the country last week, one of them said:—

"Linda, don't you want to help me pick peas this morning?"

"I'd like to, dear," replied Ethalinda, "but I am not properly dressed for picking peas."

"Why, how is that?"

"I forgot to bring a pea-jacket with me."

Sometimes since six convicted servants, viz., our white men, one white woman, and one mulatto man, living with several masters on Rappahannock River, combined together to run away, and accordingly stole a boat, went down the river to the bay, and proceeded to the mouth of York River, where they met with an old man and his boy in a small sloop, going to carry corn from one part of the bay to another. They forced the man and boy to surrender the sloop and gave them the boat which they had. Then they proceeded in the sloop toward New York, but, by their unskillfulness in navigation and contrary winds, they were kept out so long that they were almost perished with hunger. At length they were met by Capt. Long in his Majesty's ship the —. The convicts told the Captain a fernal story that they sailed from London in a ship bound for these ports, but were unfortunately met with by pirates on this coast, who took them and their ship, stripped them of all, and turned them (poor creatures) adrift in that little sloop, &c. The Captain had compassion on them, took them on board, ordered them to be better clothed and fed, and so proceeded toward Virginia. Meantime one of the man-of-war's sailors, rummaging their little sloop, found some screws and rollers, who immediately informed the Captain of it, and told him that as these things were used in no other country than Virginia or Maryland for rolling tobacco, he believed these people were runaways from thence, and had imposed falsehoods on him. The Captain thereupon ordered one of them (a young man of better countenance than the rest) to be brought to him, who, upon examination, confessed the whole story of their running away, and taking the poor old man's sloop from him. They were secured, and when the ship arrived in Virginia were delivered up to justice, committed to prison, and were last week tried at this city by a Court of Admiralty, were found guilty of piracy, and all six received sentence of death. His Honour the Governor, through his own clemency and the intercession of Capt. Long, has been pleased to reprise the young man above mentioned, and one other, and the rest, viz., two white men, one white woman, and a mulatto man, are to be executed in a few days, and two of them hung in chains, viz., one at Rappahannock River, near the place whence they ran, and the other at York River, near the place where they committed the piracy. There are three points in the law regarding newspapers which every reader ought to be conversant with. First—if any person orders his paper discontinued, he must pay all arrearages, or the publisher may continue to send it until payment is made, and collect the whole amount whether it is taken from the office or not. Second—Any person who takes a paper from the post office, whether directed to his name or another, or whether he has subscribed or not, is responsible for the pay. Third—if one orders his paper to be stopped at a certain time, and the publisher continues to send, the subscriber is bound to pay for it if he takes it out of the post office.

ADVICE TO MOTHERS.—Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with pain of Cutting Teeth? If so send at once and get a bottle of "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" for Children Teething. Its value is incalculable. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers; there is no mistake about it. It cures Dysentery and Diarrhoea, regulates the Stomach and Bowels, cures Wind Colic, softens the Gums, reduces Inflammation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. "Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup" for children teething is pleasant to the taste and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States, and price 25c. a bottle. Be sure and ask for "MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP," and take no other kind.

Cholera Preventative.

In order to withstand cholera and such like epidemics a perfect purity of the blood, and the proper action of the stomach, are required. To insure that end, in the cheapest, most available and complete manner, use McGregor's Speedy cure for dyspepsia and impure blood. There is no purer, safer or more reliable remedy in existence for indigestion, dyspepsia, costiveness, etc. Ask your neighbor or any person who has used it. Sold at Grange's and Huffman's drug stores, Napanee, and at Jas. Aylsworth drug store Tamworth.

—The usual complement of fakirs, shell-and-pea men, three card monte and other tricksters arrived in town with the circus Tuesday, but were speedily made to "close up shop" by the Chief and Mayor. Chief McKinnon took a run down from Belleville Tuesday afternoon for the purpose of "spotting" these gentry.

The rain for once was conciliatory on Tuesday and kept itself behind the clouds all day. At Kingston it rained steadily all day from 10 a. m., till midnight, but notwithstanding the excessive dampness there was a large attendance at the circus.

The question of providing a retreat for the indigent portion of the population of our county during the winter was mooted at the town council meeting Monday night and referred to a committee. Such an institution would materially lessen the charity expenses.

Upwards of 140 head of cattle were shipped by G. T. R. from Napanee Wednesday by Mr. James Aiken, to Liverpool, Eng. It was a remarkably fine herd of animals and was valued at $10,000. The cattle were all purchased within a radius of two miles of Centreville.

Messrs. McKim and Lowe having purchased the stock of C. W. Knight & Co., Tamworth, will continue the business in the old stand. They hope to see all old customers and lots of new ones too, and as they are well known to be excellent workmen, success should be their reward.

One of the self-binders manufactured by John Herring was recently tried on the farm of Mr. Rooks, in Richmond, and gave the best of satisfaction. Messrs. Manly Jones, W. G. Gunn, Robert Shannon and J. W. Rooks were present and say that the machine did its work well. Twelve acres were cut and one team used.

Mr. James Hosey has been improving his premises on the corner of Bridge and West-sts. The fence has been removed and the lawn nicely graded, while both houses have been painted inside and out and a new porch erected in front of the brick residence. We would like to see more of our citizens follow Mr. Hosey's lead in thus beautifying their residences.

A rare opportunity to purchase an excellent farm of 100 acres is offered. The farm is situated on lot 16, first concession of Hallowell, the pleasantest part of Prince Edward county; 2 miles west of Bloomfield, 6 miles from Picton and 3 miles from Wellington. The proprietor wishes to sell on account of ill health. For further description of premises see advt.

Monday evening a disturbance occurred on East-st., near the entrance of the Brisco House yards. The police appeared and ordered the crowd to disperse, when a young man named Kerr, of Belleville, in direct defiance of the officer's command, struck a bystander and knocked him over. He was arrested but allowed to go with a warning from the Mayor.

Lockwood has the latest novel, "The Heiress of Glen Gower." New organ books, latest music, young ladies journal, cheap indelible pencils, the grenadier bank, a new thing and a great curiosity. For the boys interested in fiddling a sample line called the "Russian violin" will be soon to hand. As they say in the circus, "Wait for it." Lots of new things coming to hand daily at the Bazaar bookstor e. Corner Brisco House block.

Rev. Bidwell Lane, of New York City, occupied the pulpit of the Western Methodist Church on Sunday evening last. The church was crowded and the vast audience listened with marked attention to the able discourse delivered. The beautiful anthem sung by the choir and the well-chosen hymns formed an interesting part of the service. We were glad to notice that the Rev. Mr. Emley had so far recovered from his illness as to be able to be present.

W. H. AYLSWORTH, reeve.

The usual complement of fakirs, shell-and-pea men, three card monte and other tricksters arrived in town with the circus Tuesday, but were speedily made to "close up shop" by the Chief and Mayor. Chief McKinnon took a run down from Belleville Tuesday afternoon for the purpose of "spotting" these gentry.

The "Grain" committee of the Board of Trade are making arrangements tending to increase competition in the barley trade, whereby the farmer will be greatly benefited. With good crops of bright plump barley, and the efforts of this committee to sharpen trade, the prospects are good for a profitable season.

At the council meeting Monday night Chief Allen was instructed to see that the dog tax by law was strictly enforced. A batch of summonses to derelict parties will probably be issued next week. We have been authorized to state that this year costs will be added. If your dog has not been registered, see to it at once and save money and endless trouble.

Chief Allen receiving private admonition Monday night to be on the look-out for a gang of burglars, pick-pockets and "bunko" men of all sorts who preceded and followed in the wake of Forepaugh's circus, extra policemen were placed on patrol and night-watchman Emberson was given a "pointer" to be specially alert. As a result of these extra precautionary measures no cases of theft or robbery have as yet been reported.

The yacht Atlanta now owned in Brighton has been entered at all of the regattas of the Lake Yachting Association this season. At Belleville she took second money and at Kirkston, Oswego, Toronto and Charlotte first money. With such yachts as the Norah Aileen, Ethel, Ariadne, Cygnet and Verve to compete with the above record is indeed a creditable one. The Atlanta was built by Cuthbert.

Mr. Chas Stevens is doing a very large business in leached and unleached Canada hardwood ashes, which are shipped in large quantities to farmers in the United States, principally as a soil fertilizer. Last week he shipped seven carloads, one car being an extra quality of hardwood ashes for manufacturing purposes; the other six were despatched to one man in New Hampshire. Mr. Stevens has had some handsome circulars printed at THE EXPRESS office this week and intends booming the business.

Bay of Quinte District camp-meeting will be held (D. V.) on Thursday, Aug. 26th, at 2 p. m., at Twelve O'clock Point, the head of the Bay of Quinte and entrance to the Murray Canal. Several distinguished Ministers will be in attendance. Cheap rates have been arranged for on the C. O. R. A cordial invitation is extended to Minister of adjacent circuits to attend. Kingstons camp-meeting will commence on the Glenvale camp-ground (about 8 miles from Kingston, on the K & P. R.) on Thursday August 26th.

The regularly meeting of the W. C. T. U. was held at Mr. Symington's residence Tuesday afternoon. There was a large attendance of ladies despite the numerous outside attractions, and all greatly enjoyed the plain, practical address delivered by Rev. Mr. Lane, of New York. The rev. gentlemen spoke of the great benefits to be accrued by mankind from such an organization and referred to the good work done by similar societies in the States. Committees were appointed to circulate the world's petition for prohibition, to be signed by women only. This is a mammoth undertaking, ladies of all climes and latitudes uniting in requesting prohibition all over the world.
